Answer the Following Questions in about 120-150 words

1. No one is born hating another person because of the colour of his skin, or his background or his religion'. Yes, Iagree with this statement. This lays stress on the fact that no one is born with innate characteristics. Feelings of hate and prejudice are learnt behaviours. Being a Black man,Nelson Mandela faced the injustice and the bad apartheid system. He wasn't born with these negative feelings but was shown them through the society. He fought against the system to end the discrimination. He understood the fact that hate and prejudice were learnt things and can be renmoved through education. He believed that these barriers of humanity could be broken. In conclusion, Mandela's view of overcoming the racial system in South Africa can be achieved through compassion and education. In this way, he will suceed in making an equal society.

Answer the Following Questions in about 40-50 words

2. (a) According to Mandela,both the oppressor and the oppressed require liberation.
   (b) Both the oppressor and the oppressed are robbed of their humanity. According to Mandela, if one person takes away another person's freedom, they themselves become a prisoner of prejudice. They become shackled and restricted by their own biases and actions.
   (c) I While the oppressed are dehumanised because that is how the oppressors treat them, the oppressors too are dehumanised as a consequence of their own actions.
   (d) The oppressed may be seen as actual prisoners, but the oppressors too are prisoners of their own hate.
3. I would like to ask the following two questions to
   Nelson Mandela during an interview:
   (i) How did your education help you in contributing to the removal of apartheid?
   (iii) At wvhich age did you decide to study law? What exactly piqued your interest in the subject?
4. As a proposition speaker:
   It is rightly said that Courage, Wisdom and Generosity are the only attributes of a remarkable leader. A leader should be ready to face any problem. It may be internal or external. To solve the matter, he should analyse before passing the judgement where he has to use his wisdom. He should not be partial in his decision, here he needs courage when necessary. He should be generous in helping others without hesitation.
5. (a) I believe that freedom isn't selfish individually. It is the generosity of self with the world.
   (b) My friend, true freedom isn't realised by the lack of physical boundaries but is born through the revelations of the society people around us, our understanding of others and the outward expression of our heart and soul.
6. According to Nelson Mandela, every man has two obligations-one is towards his family and the other is towards his people and his country. But in the reign of apartheid, if one tries to fulfil his duty towards his people, he is ripped off with his family and home.
